There is a growing body of research on the relationship between the use of technology and the development of mathematical skills. This research suggests that technology can be used to enhance learning and understanding of mathematical concepts. For example, interactive software can provide students with immediate feedback and allow them to explore mathematical concepts in a more dynamic and engaging way. Additionally, technology can be used to provide students with access to a wide range of resources, including textbooks, online tutorials, and interactive simulations. This can help students to learn at their own pace and to receive the support they need to succeed. Overall, the use of technology in mathematics education has the potential to improve student outcomes and to make learning more effective and enjoyable.

These findings were obtained from a study of 100 patients with a confirmed diagnosis of schizophrenia. The patients were recruited from a psychiatric hospital in London. The study was approved by the local research ethics committee.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life (HRQL) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week training program consisting of aerobic and resistance exercises. The control group (n = 20) remained sedentary. The primary outcome was the change in HRQL, measured using the SF-36 questionnaire. Secondary outcomes included changes in physical fitness, measured using a 6-minute walk test and a 10-minute step test. The results showed that the intervention group had a significant improvement in HRQL, particularly in the physical function domain, compared to the control group. The intervention group also showed a significant improvement in physical fitness, measured by the 6-minute walk test and the 10-minute step test. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness and HRQL of sedentary, middle-aged women.

2,200 firms paid Saddam kickbacks

By Joseph Campbell

UNITED NATIONS—MORE THAN 2,200 COMPANIES, including major contractors like Bechtel, Fluor, Parsons and Mitsui, made illicit payments totaling $1.5 billion to Saddam Hussein's government to do specific jobs as part of a secret oil-for-food program, UN investigators said Tuesday.

The UN watchdog released a report Tuesday, 100 days after the UN Security Council passed a resolution in July 2002 that ended the oil-for-food program. The report says that the UN Security Council's decision to end the program was "premature" and that the UN should have waited until the program was fully implemented.

More Taiwanese manufacturers are turning to Subic Park for expansion

By Joseph V. Russo

MANILA, Philippines — The Subic Bay Freeport Zone, a major industrial and commercial hub in the Philippines, is attracting more Taiwanese manufacturers for expansion. The zone, which covers 1,500 hectares, is one of the largest and most developed freeport zones in the world. It has a long history of attracting foreign investment, particularly from Taiwan. In recent years, the number of Taiwanese companies operating in the zone has increased significantly. This is due to a combination of factors, including the zone's strategic location, its infrastructure, and the incentives offered to investors. The zone's location in Subic Bay, a major port on Luzon, provides easy access to international markets. Its infrastructure, including roads, utilities, and telecommunications, is well-developed. Additionally, the zone offers various incentives to investors, including tax breaks and land concessions. These factors have made the zone an attractive destination for Taiwanese manufacturers looking to expand their operations in the Philippines.

Gov't seen to post gains in tax effort

By Joseph V. Russo

MANILA, Philippines — The Philippine government is expected to post significant gains in its tax effort this year, according to officials. The government has implemented a series of measures to improve tax collection, including the introduction of new taxes and the strengthening of enforcement mechanisms. These measures are expected to result in a substantial increase in tax revenue. The government has also been working to improve the efficiency of its tax administration. This includes the implementation of a new tax system and the hiring of more tax officials. The government is confident that these efforts will lead to a significant increase in tax revenue, which will be used to fund various development projects and social programs. The increase in tax revenue is also expected to help reduce the government's budget deficit and improve its overall financial position. This is a positive sign for the Philippine economy, as it indicates that the government is successfully implementing its tax reform program and improving its revenue collection efforts.

Future research should include longitudinal studies to explore the temporal sequence of events and the potential mediating factors in the relationship between the variables.
